Paul of Damascus, Jordan – and the Open Dialectical Comments of Sirohi, with Coltrane – Can we know the future by this Dialectical Process of Health, or each subjective moment in Fact

By Shomit Sirohi

I. Open dialectics argues

In fact the process is a moment in life and existentialism, which is subjectively the process of a jazz commentary – that one is in that moment, experiencing this fact and it is jazz Coltrane who means now one is killing killing, and then one is relieved in the next process with the discourse being just that in a dialectical unity of then a process checking that moment into infinity. In the sense of an exact comment on the unity of process, moment and existentialism – it can answer any question.

II. Paul's Answer

In today's Deterior capitalism we witness a Hegelian argument which is music and psychoanalysis which then argues on its steps but is in fact idealist – the process is materialist in Sirohi – is this true, in fact true to fact – Paul argues yes, because it is the truth. His news is we have discovered a perfect science that we can also believe in, it answers our question – the subjective crisis and its objective development is then also answered with faith in that jazz Coltrane for this process which overlapps and is transcendence and facticity – it means we are free. If it fails, it answers that as well – Invincible.
